Some blow the mellow, melancholy horn, Which, save the Knight, no man of woman born, Eer heard and fell not senseless to the ground, With viewless fetters of enchantment bound. The nodding trees its magic influence own, And, spell-struck, drop their golden clusters down; The forests quaver, and elysian bowers, With pleasing tremors shed their fragrant flowers. An awful silence, winds and waters keep; And spell-chained brooks, that bound from steep to steep, On jutting rocks, delay their headlong leap. The cross alone, the holy cross disarms The Fairy fiends, and baffles all their charms. SONG OF THE SEER. On sweet May-eve, when groves were green, And wild birds chanted merrily, When the air was calm, the sky serene, It was a lady of high degree, And she sat under a green-wood tree, O! she waited there for her dear...
