Minimum Comfort Budgets The minimum comfort budgets, on the other hand, are based on the needs and expenditures of higher grade and skilled workers. They represent an ideal to be attained, rather than a minimum of prevailing conditions which can be considered acceptable and by which all others are to be measured. Attempts to establish a budget for American workers on this higher standard seem to have developed simultaneously in two cities on the Pacific Coast in the fall of 1917. In October, 1917, Jessica B. Peixotto of the faculty of the University of i California prepared a detailed estimate of the cost of maintaining a minimum standard of wholesome living and not mere subsistence in San. Francisco¹ and at the same time William F. Ogburn and other members of the faculty of Economics and Sociology of the University of Washington prepared a...
