S. defense market; (4) allied officials stated that they seek to maximize competitive opportunities, but reserve the right to limit competition or direct contracts to national or other European sources; (5) U. S. industry officials stated that such factors as lessening U. S. technology transfer controls, understanding foreign defense procurement practices, and maintaining a substantial in-country presence are required to successfully compete for defense-related contracts in Europe; (6) although DOD added procurement procedure annexes to existing MOU to promote equal treatment for U. S. contractors and promote more openness and accountability...
