Excerpt: . . . that people with amputations have. The Center in Seattle is focusing a little bit more on prevention of limb loss and they are coordinating their research activities with a podiatry service, clinical podiatry service which leads a program called PACT, which is Prevention of Amputation Care Team, which is a national program within the VA. That focuses on reducing the risk of amputation primarily for older veterans who are at risk due to diabetes and peripheral vascular disease. The center in Seattle is a research center that coordinates with clinical centers, but I think they are talking about a different type of center. I think that they were talking about a clinical center for prosthetics care maybe to link with the center in Seattle. But I do not want to speak-The Chairman. Well, wait a minute. Let me ask Mr. Blake because I am...
